

COLLEGIATE SCHOLASTIC MENTORING PROGRAM

Press Release For Immediate Release

NEWNAN, Georgia May 10, 2007--Brigette's Technology Consulting and Research Firm (Brigette's) has introduced the "Collegiate Scholastic Mentoring" (CSM) initiative. CSM aims to increase the number of 21st century knowledge-sharing leaders by encouraging a colleague to enroll in a specific technical program or associate's, masters, doctorates, or grand doctorates degree program within or external of the scope of the colleague's profession.

The initial incentive focuses on increasing the number of 21st century knowledge-sharing entrepreneurs by encouraging entrepreneurs to further their education within or external of the scope of entrepreneurs' businesses.

Dr. Brenda Nelson-Porter (2007) has coined the title, "Collegiatepreneurialist," a scholastic practitioner who has a background and experience in entrepreneurialship, marketing and advertising, business and e-Business, human resources management, history, theory, and religion.

Collegiatepreneurialist posits if A can vision, understand, and relay what B aims to create, then A and B have kinship spirits.

Collegiatepreneurialism involves that a scholar connects entrepreneurs from various sectors across the nation with an educational institution to attempt to promote the emergence of a global learning team of entrepreneurs.

The initiative aims to present an image that small business owners are professionals and are dedicated to keeping abreast of historical and contemporary knowledge. With entrepreneurs learning around the global, knowledge sharing may become a source to solve global issues.

Brigette's Technology Consulting and Research Firm primarily mentors and coaches doctoral learners and small businesses owners. If entrepreneurs possess a passion that is willing to be lived by becoming a "Collegiatepreneur", then entrepreneurs are invited to email Brigette's their full name, mailing address, phone number, and website address(es) to be connect as a potential scholastic candidate.
